
CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

Henry Abramson is an Assistant Professor of History and Judaic Studies at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. He is the author of A Prayer for the Government: Ukrainians and Jews in Revolutionary Times, 1917-1920 (Harvard University Press, 1999) and numerous scholarly articles. He is currently working on a study of Hasidic manuscripts from the Warsaw Ghetto.

Pierre Anctil est Directeur p. i., Direction des Relations inter-culturelles, Ministère des Relations avec les citoyens et Immigration, Gouvernement du Québec. Son livre le plus récent est la traduction du deuxième tome des Mémoires d'Israël Medresh, Le Montréal juif de l'entre deux guerres (Septentrion, 2001).

Mervin Butovsky is Professor Emeritus of English Literature at Concordia University in Montreal. His publications include essays on A.M. Klein and Irving Layton, and interviews with Canadian Jewish writers including Adele Wiseman, Henry Kreissel, Matt Cohen and Norman Levine. He co-edited two volumes of studies on the history and culture of the Montreal Jewish community with Ira Robinson and Pierre Anctil, and with Ode Garfinkle, translated from the Yiddish and edited selected short stories by Yaakov Zipper entitled The Far Side of the River (1985).

Ode Garfinkle is the daughter of Yaakov Zipper. She has taught in the Jewish day schools of Montreal. She graduated from Columbia University's School of Library Science, and, with Merivin Butovsky, co-edited and translated from the Yiddish the selected short stories of Yaakov Zipper entitled The Far Side of the River (1985).

Joseph B. Glass is the academic co-ordinator of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem's Halbert Centre for Canadian Studies. He lectures at the Hebrew University's Department of Geography and Rothberg International School. His current research interests are the relationship between the American and Canadian Jewish communities and the Land of Israel, the role of Sephardi (Middle Eastern Jewish) entrepreneurs in the transfer of innovation and technology to the Land of Israel through the use of biographies and family biographies and the development of Canadian Studies in Israel. He is the author together with Ruth Kark of Sephardi Entrepreneurs in Eretz Israel, The Amzalak Family, 1816-1918 and the author of From New Zion to Old Zion, American Jewish Immigration and Settlement in Palestine, 1917-1939.

Howard Gontovnick is an instructor in the Department of Continuing Education at Vanier College, Montreal. He is also a psychotherapist with a private practice in Chomedey, Laval.

Rebecca Margolis is a graduate student in Yiddish Studies at Columbia University in New York. She is currently working on a doctoral dissertation on Yiddish literary culture in Montreal in the interwar years.

Jocelyn Saint-Pierre est le responsable pour le projet de reconstitution des débats de l'Assemblée Nationale du Québec.

Janine Stingel works at the National Archives of Canada in Ottawa. She is the author of Social Discredit: Anti-Semitism, Social Credit and the Jewish Response (McGill-Queen's University Press, 2000).